Types of Accessible Services Definitions

The types of accessible services that pharmacies can report are described in more detail below.

Hearing Services

- Video Relay Services – Allows people with hearing disabilities who use American Sign Language to communicate with people over the telephone using video equipment instead of through typed text.ⁱ
- Teletypewriters – Allows people with hearing disabilities who use American Sign Language to communicate with people over the telephone using typed messages. Sometimes this service is referred to as a Telecommunications Device for the Deaf (TDD).ⁱⁱ
- Sign Language Interpreters on Staff – Indicates that a pharmacy staff member is present and able to fluently communicate with patients with hearing disabilities using American Sign Language.
- Speech-reading or lip-reading services – Indicates that a pharmacy staff member is present and able to fluently communicate with patients with hearing disabilities using speech- or lip-reading (the ability to understand speech by carefully watching the lip patterns and movement of the tongue and face of the person speaking).ⁱⁱⁱ
- Visual medical aids to communicate pharmacy information – Any kind of sign, pamphlet, or other visual aid that would help people with hearing disabilities understand information from the pharmacy.

Vision Services

- Oversize font labels – Labels for pharmacy prescription bottles that come in a larger than normal size so people with low vision can better read their prescription labels.
- Contrasted color background labels – Labels for pharmacy prescription bottles that have a strong contrast between the text and background of the label, so those who have low vision or are colorblind can read the labels.
- Grade 1 braille labels – Labels for pharmacy prescription bottles that come in Grade 1 braille. Grade 1 braille is a letter-for-letter substitution of the printed alphabet, making it the preferred braille code for beginner learners.^{iv}
- Contracted braille labels – Labels for pharmacy prescription bottles that come in contracted braille. Contracted, or Grade 2, braille is used by more experienced braille users, with similar letters, punctuation, and numbers as Grade 1 braille, but includes special signs to represent common words or groups of letters.^v
- Audio labels/prescription readers – Labels for pharmacy prescription bottles that will audibly recite the prescription information to the patient who is visually impaired.
